FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

DANILO ANSELMO NAMED MICHIGAN SUPREME COURT REPORTER OF DECISIONS

LANSING, MI, January 31, 2003 – Danilo Anselmo, a long-time employee of the Michigan Supreme Court, has been named Reporter of Decisions. He succeeds Norman C. Helfer, who is retiring from the Court. Anselmo will start in his new position on February 3.

Chief Justice Maura D. Corrigan said that Anselmo “brings to the position 18 years of experience as a Legal Editor working under the Reporter of Decisions. The Court is glad to have someone of his expertise in this position.”

The Reporter of Decisions is responsible for editing and publishing decisions of the Michigan Supreme Court and Michigan Court of Appeals. The Reporter of Decisions also publishes Michigan court rules, rules of evidence, and Supreme Court administrative orders.

As Legal Editor, a position he held since 1985, Anselmo was responsible for editing published Michigan Court of Appeals opinions. Before joining the Reporter of Decisions office, he served as a law clerk and court officer in the 54-A District Court in Lansing.

Anselmo’s undergraduate degree is from Michigan State University, where he majored in pre-law. He received his law degree from Cooley Law School in 1983.

Anselmo resides in Lansing with his wife, Fe, and their daughter Amelia.
